Help Freedom get to 16 pages by advertising YOUR business with us

THE BRITISH National Party is currently undertaking a door-to-door sales initiative for Freedom. To help our salesmen and women we are hoping to increase the size of the newspaper to 16 pages, making it a value-for-money product at the new price this month of 50p.

Printing and producing four extra pages costs money and to raise this extra revenue, Freedom is opening its pages to advertisements.

At the European Elections in June 808,200 people voted for the British National Party. This is a significant support base for the party and a huge well of goodwill for any business that advertises with us.

For its May issue, Freedom reached a record circulation of 70,000 and over the last 12 months the paper has managed an average circulation of 40,000.

Our readers are fiercely loyal to the British National Party and any business advertising in Freedom is guaranteed to be looked upon very favourably by our readership.

BNP chairman, Nick Griffin, when launching the door-to-door sales initiative, announced a campaign target of 150,000 Freedom sales a month by the middle of next year.

With such a circulation, businesses will be queuing up to advertise in the paper, but with limited space, Freedom will give preference to existing advertisers - those who come forward now to help us as we take these first tentative steps to introduce advertisements into the paper.

QUESTION TIME AT THE RWB: Brian Galloway wants to know what the party is doing to attract the 'grey vote' at the next General Election. Mulling over the question are Martin Wingfield (Editor of Freedom), Nick Griffin (BNP Chairman), Tony Lecomber (Group Development) and David Jones (Data Protection).

Is there a conspiracy over race riot reporting?

I AM convinced that there is a conspiracy between the Government and the press in the way that race riots are reported in the media.

I travel extensively in my business and hear about various forms of racial tension up and down the country from local sources.

There have also been two racially based riots here in Bristol within two weeks and that the local paper has reported an entirely different reason for the trouble.

My theory is that the Government may have secretly ordered the press not to report any racially motivated rioting to avoid a repeat of the trouble at Toxteth, St Pauls and Brixton where one riot encouraged the others.

One riot was because an internet cafe in Lawrence Hill placed a sign in the window stating 'BLACKS ONLY'. Needless to say local white residents were upset by this and a series of altercations took place leading to a major disturbance which needed 300 police to restore order.

This must happen up and down the country, but its never reported!

Howard Bull, Bristol.

Homecare not hijackers

A RECENT BBC1 Panorama programme highlighted the problems working folk have in getting homecare for relatives suffering from dementia and other such like illnesses.

The programme showed how the government has put obstacle after obstacle in the way of these people so that the exchequer can avoid providing homecare, which on average costs around £50,000 per person, per year.

The very next day The Mirror reported on those Afghan hijackers who flew into Stanstead a couple of years ago.

The article pointed out that the cost to the taxpayer for the legal case and the upkeep of the hijackers and the families was, to date, £37 million!

If my maths is correct that £37 million pounds would give 740 years worth of homecare to the most needy people in this country.

R. Huckle, Welwyn Garden City.

Councils ban chickens

I AGREE with the BNP on the humanisation of our cities and with encouraging self sufficiency, so as to produce as much of our own food as we possibly can.

My Grandfather used to keep chickens during the war years, and in difficult times, these were a valuable source of eggs and meat.

Nowadays, if you try to keep a rooster and several chickens, the neighbours complain to the council and you are ordered to get rid of them. If you are a council tenant then there is an outright ban on the keeping of livestock and if you own your own house and garden, the council can still demand that you get rid of livestock.

Andy Pryce, Birmingham.

Instilled with self-hate

I BELIEVE that the vast majority of the British people do actually support the British National Party and what it stands for but are simply afraid of being branded a "racist" or "nazi".

This state of fear has been brought about through self-hate and shame that has been instilled into us by anti-British elements in the media.

The first step to gaining the open support of these voters is to improve the image of the BNP in the eyes of the public.

Towards this end I was delighted to see that the party is actively taking steps to remove any undesirables from its ranks.

Mr. A.P. Bruce, Billingham

No-go areas in Walsall

BIRCHILLS in Walsall is a no-go area. No white person in their right mind would walk around there after dark and even the police avoid it unless there is a major incident.

In other areas of Walsall, such as Chuckery and the town centre, you will find armed gangs of Iraqi Kurds fighting with Somalis.

When the police are called they just move people on as though the disturbances are inconsequential.

As my Father-in-law said the other day: "I'm glad I haven't got many more years left. It's you younger ones I feel sorry for."

Mrs Karen Clifft, Walsall.

Young following the old

IN Acton in West London, street crime and car crime are at the worst levels ever.

Half a dozen thugs, of West Indian origin, are responsible for 80% of the crime in this area. They brazenly swagger around the streets and it is as if the police look the other way.

Young white families have had enough and are following the example of the older generation and leaving Acton. It's a sorry state of affairs.

Steve Butler, Acton.

Funny, no arrests?

IN Darcus Howe's documentary on Channel 4, there were several racially motivated insults and threats of violence directed at other minority racial groups.

I don't recall reading in the press the next morning that the Police were investigating any of these incidents?

Are Black and Asian groups allowed to racially threaten each other in this country with impunity, as though they are outside the new draconian laws imposed on the decent honest indigenous people of Great Britain?

A. Green, Liverpool

Concentrating on ethnics

LEEDS South Homes, which is wholly owned by Leeds City Council, has sent all its tenants a questionnaire asking about their racial origins, sexual orientation, religion, disability and employment status.

The questionnaire concentrates on ethnic minorities and nowhere does it allow you to claim being English or being able to speak and read English.

For what possible reason does a HOUSING management team need data like this?

Bob Mason, Leeds.
